Please find below and/or attached an Office communication concerning this application or proceeding.

Art Unit: 1714

LETTER WITH RESPECT TO 1.132 DECLARATION

Note that said 1.132 declaration has been crossed-over the mail. Said 1.132 declaration has little probative value since it was based on applicant's own choice, not on the closest prior art by omitting polybrominated 1,4-diphenoxybenzene and antimony oxide taught by Abolins since the instantly recited "composed of" and "comprising" permits the presence of other component.

Also, it is odd why the amounts of an organic clay and a clay in Example B and C are different. The same amount should be used in order to have a fair comparison. One example alone cannot overcome the rejection of claims reciting a broader amount of an organic clay even if said 1.132 declaration had any probative value. In another words, the showing does not commensurate in scope with claims.
